

SUSPECT LIST

Fanny Birchwood

A new addition to the city, Fanny is young and wild, and has been since she was just a girl. All her life she looked forward to the days when she could be a grown up and do what she liked. Never one to embrace a corset, when she came of age and prohibition began, she was devastated. Naturally, when she heard of the secret gin joints opening in the city, she ran away from her rural home and sought out those in charge. Her commanding personality and joie de vivre ensured she always had the secret passwords to get into The Caterpillar Club. Having ingratiated herself into the speakeasy culture, Fanny is well-known by all who frequent The Caterpillar Club, and is never one to turn down a dance when given the opportunity to show off her Charleston.

Hazel Turner

Saucy, sassy and full of spunk, Hazel is a regular at The Caterpillar Club. Her group of girls, which includes Fanny Birchwood, can be found most nights at the club, drinking, smoking and laughing far louder than any proper society girl should. Hazel loves Jazz music, especially when accompanied by moonshine, and rarely turns down the chance to dance. Because of this, she's quite popular among the male patrons, who are cuing up to dance with her. Because of her popularity, she is always given the secret password to The Caterpillar Club, and the party livens when she and her group of friends arrive.

Marian Coleman

Wife of Charles "Lucky" Coleman, owner of The Caterpillar Club, Marian enjoys the high life. A woman with an appreciation for the finer things, Marian has been called a "gold digger" by many other women, as her taste toward men generally steers her toward the wealthy. Having come from a poor family, local businessman Charles Coleman was a good match for her, and since the on-set of prohibition, Marian's marital gamble has payed off; smuggling business is booming and so is her jewellery collection. Despite having no official role in the business dealings at The Caterpillar Club, Marian insists on accompanying her husband to the club each evening, in order to play "hostess" and ensure the regulars, and their thick wallets, return night after night.

Mylena Star

Mylena is Mr. Foxx's personal secretary, and lives in a place called Sands Point, which is a full day away from this city by train. Mylena handles most of Mr. Foxx's communication, arranges meetings and even organizes the details for Mr. Foxx's lavish parties. She is distinguished and poised, clearly a young woman of good breeding. Mylena oozes glamour, and while many men have asked her to dance tonight at The Caterpillar Club, she remains "strictly business" in her dealings.

Stodgy “Bag ‘O Bricks” Turner

Stodgy Turner is a businessman, and since the on-set of prohibition, has been capitalizing off the city's thirst for alcohol. Having international connections from previous business dealings, Stodgy was one of the first in the city to begin importing illegal alcohol from Nova Scotia, Canada. While business is great, he is considered the second most profitable man in the city, after the victim, . Unfortunately for him, because of the intense battle for control of organized crime in the city, this once straight-laced businessman has found himself in the thick of a war for control of smuggling, speakeasies and organized crime. It's a well-known fact that Stodgy can't swim... he claims that in water, he would sink like a bag of bricks, which is how he earned his nickname.

Charles “Lucky” Coleman

Local businessman Charles Coleman is a self-made man through and through. As he came of age he got into shipping, and over the subsequent years amassed a vast fortune from his shipping business. With the on-set of prohibition (and some of his major imports having been spirits), Charles turned his attention toward illegal smuggling. With one of the only smuggling operations in the city, opening a “speakeasy” was an obvious progression for him. Since, other smugglers have emerged, however Charles is still the biggest – at least for now. With the number of known gangsters who frequent his speakeasy, rumour has it that the race for control of the city's main smuggling ports is heating up. Charles gained his nickname, “Lucky” from the number of raids he has avoided, although he insists it's thanks to good information and a series of switches that, when flipped, turn the speakeasy into a regular looking dry card club.

Francis “Knuckles” Carbine

Francis “Knuckles” Carbine was known as the victim, Bill Mahoney's right-hand man and his personal security guard. Knuckles was never away from Bulletproof Bill's side, and was the main reason Bill had not been killed months ago. A hard, yet quiet man, Knuckles is rumoured to have killed a man with a single punch to the face, which earned him his nickname. A terrifying gangster, Knuckles refuses to carry a weapon, instead relying on his brute strength and instincts to get him out of any situation. Seemingly un-killable, Knuckles has been shot at least eight times and has lived, giving rise to the rumours that he is invincible. Knuckles is an intimidating man who always seems ready for a fight, and those who are smart steer clear of this brute.

Mr. Foxx

A smuggler from a place called Sands Point, Mr. Foxx is a legend in his own right. Elusive as he is wealthy, Mr. Foxx is rarely seen in person, but he throws the most raucous parties in his mansion, Lands End, the grandeur of which is renowned all over the nation. A brilliant businessman, Mr. Foxx is in town for reasons unknown, although it's safe to assume it has something to do with his own smuggling operation in Sands Point. Mr. Foxx is attending The Caterpillar Club with his personal secretary, Mylena Star, and the two are rarely apart.

Joe Little

Despite his name, Joe Little is not a man to be trifled with. He is strong and brash, and won't waste a second throwing a patron out of The Caterpillar Club if he thinks it necessary. He's a hard man who rarely smiles and takes his position very seriously, and frisks everyone as they arrive for weapons, as per his boss, Charles "Lucky" Coleman's instructions.

Teddy "Winks" Strathmore

A member of Stodgy "Bag 'O Bricks" gang, Teddy is rarely called "Teddy" - most simply know him now as "Winks". He earned his nickname because of the amount he winks... no one is sure if it's a nervous tick or if, thanks to the onset of prohibition and all of the code words he uses in the smuggling trade, he now just does it out of habit. Regardless, a conversation with Winks can be slightly confusing if one is not aware that he winks at random moments and for no particular reason. Winks earned his place in Bag 'O Bricks' gang because of his powers of negotiation and his flawless aim with any kind of firearm.

Kenny “The Wall” Blonds

One of Bulletproof Bill Mahoney's bodyguards, Kenny “The Wall” Blonds works with Knuckles Carbine to keep Bulletproof Bill Mahoney safe no matter where he is. Kenny earned his nickname of “The Wall” because of the number of bullets he has taken for his boss, as well as the fact that anyone who wants to speak with Bulletproof Bill must first go through Kenny Blonds. The Wall is all muscle, and can intimidate anyone into backing down just by crossing his arms and standing in their way.

Floyd Fredrick

Floyd Fredrick is a reporter for The Front Page, a widely-circulated tabloid that glamorizes celebrities and thrives on scandal. He's the best reporter at the paper, and loves to embellish stories to give his readers a thrill. Floyd is known to do anything to get his story, and was even accused of taking pictures through a screen star's bedroom window once, although the allegations were never confirmed.

Leonard Lewis

It's not easy being a bartender during prohibition, but Leonard managed to score himself the gig at The Caterpillar Club, and the money, especially tips, have been rolling in! One of the few people Charles "Lucky" Coleman trusts, Leonard knows exactly what to do in a raid to make all the illegally smuggled liquor he serves suddenly disappear. Leonard is charismatic and loves to chat with the patrons but, while he is often asked, he never dances, and rarely comes out from behind the bar.

Vito Wunder

A stranger from out of town, Vito is a mystery to most at The Caterpillar Club. He carries himself with a confidence that most men don't possess. He is a no-nonsense man who won't hesitate to stick a pistol in someone's ribs to show them who is boss. Despite this (and his clear aversion to dancing), he seems to be enjoying The Caterpillar Club, especially the spirits that flow in abundance; considering the amount of Canadian Whiskey he has put back tonight, clearly Vito's tolerance for 'the juice' is higher than most.