tara miller

Tara is a library regular, but is not a local – in fact, she spends her entire day in the library researching.... well, no one really knows what she is researching! A mysterious person, Tara keeps to herself, but was recently joined by Julian Lynch. Tara is quiet and respects most library rules, although she is never seen without a cup of coffee at her side – a transgression the library staff tend to overlook, considering the generous donations she has made to the library since she started her daily research.

paige zimmerman

A reporter for a local news and interests blog called City Beat, Paige is a woman who always gets her story! Her articles and content appeal to the more intellectual in the city, however her readership is not restricted to local readers; she has many readers world-wide, thanks to her gripping and far-reaching theories. Tenacious and outgoing, Paige keeps her blog posts focused on positive, and occasionally mysterious, happenings in the city and around the world.

cassandra planche

A patron at the library, Cassandra is a newer face at the library – definitely not a regular. Cassandra is in town on a university exchange, and has been taking her classes here instead of her home country in order to experience other cultures and immerse herself in the language. She claims she is at the library researching a paper she is writing for a university class, however Cassandra is not very forthcoming about her time in the library or what her paper is about. Cassandra speaks with a foreign accent.

cat gruen

Mild-mannered and easy going, Cat (short for Catharina) Gruen takes everything in stride – she has to, or she would go mad, working with the ensemble of characters she does. Thanks to them and her eccentric patrons, the life of a library director is never dull! Having been in the director position for a few years now, Cat runs a tight ship, making her library one of the best around for miles. She is rarely seen without a clip-board that holds a lengthy to-do list.

julian lynch

Self-proclaimed psychic Julian Lynch runs a business giving intuitive readings. While some are skeptical of his abilities, Julian's skills are recognized world-wide, and he is one of the most reputable psychics in the business. He also lends his services to the police for missing persons cases – a fact that lends credibility to his “gift”, as he has helped the police close three of the four cases on which he consulted. Julian is a peaceful man with a kind smile and loves helping others. He is not a local, and just flew into town yesterday on “private business”.

clinton weaver

Head librarian Clinton Weaver works in the library, as he has for many years now. A strict, hard-nosed man, Clinton is a stickler for the rules, and is quick to eject any “troublemakers” or “hooligans” from the library when called for. There is not much that goes on in the library that Clinton doesn't know about, and he is as much a fixture in the library as the shelves of books.

carson vulpes

Historical author Carson Vulpes is visiting the library on a book tour, promoting his book, titled "The Way of the Antiquities". While he isn't actually booked in for a reading and signing today, he has come to the library to speak with the patrons one-on-one. According to the bio on the dust jacket of his book, Carson is a writer, historian and philanthropist, raising money and helping children all over the world. He also has a PhD in medicine, and while he does not regularly practice medicine, he does work with Doctors Without Borders in his spare time. Carson, is outgoing and charismatic, and carries a copy of his book.

spencer williams

Cafe manager Spencer Williams is outgoing and charismatic. He spends his day slinging coffee for local residents and patrons of the library, and over the years has become good friends with the library staff and regulars alike. A pillar of the community, Spencer hosts a monthly fundraising evening in the cafe with live music and varying themes, with all proceeds going to help fund library initiatives. Spencer spends a lot of his free time inside the library, claiming it is his place of solace – where he comes to recharge. He is charming and intelligent, and his kind demeanour instantly puts those he meets at ease.
